18-CENT SUGAR WITHIN MONTH IS PREDICTED

New York.—(I. N. S.)—Sugar which has recently gone as high as thirty cents a pound retail and was often difficult to get at that price, will probably be selling around eighteen to twenty cents a pound within another month. It was predicted by an authority on the sugar situation here. The retail price at present, he said, is from twenty to twenty-five cents a pound.

For the last two or three weeks there has been a gradual decline in sugar prices, due to the increased supply attracted here because of the high prices. New heat sugar from the Pacific coast will soon be available, and it is generally believed that sugar will be plentiful this winter at reasonable prices.

Hair Often Ruined

By Careless Washing

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much sikali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle.

dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Muisified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which riness out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and stiky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Jenny had come to work. She wore a black skirt and a blue waist and her clean apron was in a bundle, done up in a newspaper carried under her arm. Jenny was 26, slender as a reed, with pretty hair, almost black, yet with high lights of gold in it, curling about her thin, worn, eager face. She had black oyes, far apart, and red lips. And about her eyes and lips were all sorts of wrinkles that hard work and trouble and sorrow had engraved there.

Miss Davidge had hired Jenny on the strength of certain good reports she had heard from notable folk like Mrs. Duane.

'Take your own time for it, Jenny, Miss Davidge said. Miss Davidge said.

The faultless neatness of the lower rooms charmed her. In an incredibly short space of time Jenny appeared.

"You ought to sleep good tonight, Miss Davidge," she said. "Fve cleaned out all the dust of your old dreams so they won't bother you any more, I guess. And that's the last. How do you like the look of things?"

"I am greatly pleased, Jenny," Miss Davidge said. "You must save every Friday afternoon for me. And here is a dollar." "I couldn't keep house without Jen-ny." Mrs. Duane had said. ny." Mrs. Duane had said.

So one day when the house needed attention, and Mrs. Bean, who came in once a week to sweep and dust, failed to appear. Miss Davidge sent for Jenny. "I've just been aching to get at your house this long while." Jenny told Miss Davidge frankly. "I was going by from Mrs. Duane's t'other day when Myra Bean was cleaning your front window and it gave me a pain to see the way she did it."

"I suppose different persons have difa dollar."
"My land, that's too much!" Jenny said, looking at the tempting bill wistfully, but struggling with her need. "You'd better take out a quarter, Miss and a half loaf of cake labelled stale for convenience's sake, though Jenny averred that it tasted as though it had only been "built yesterday."

After that Jenny worked many Fridays, and never failed to please.

Then one day Mrs. Duane called Miss Davidge up on the telephone. "I've got a piece of news for you, Helen." she said. "But first, did Jenny work for you yesterday?"

"Yes, just as usual. And she earned her money, too. The house was in an awful state after that meeting of the woman's club the night before."

"And she did not say anything about getting any money?"

"And she did not say anything about getting any money?"

"Money? No! Why, where could she get money from?"

"From some relative of her husband's. He came of a very decent sort of a family, I believe. At any rate, he's been left quite a little fortune—for him. Jonny won't have to work any more. I'm glad for the poor thing."

"Glad! I'm delighted enough to cry," said Miss Davidge. "But isn't it funny she never mentioned it? She acted just as usual."

Miss Duane laughed: "Isn't that Jenny right over?" she said. Miss Davidge went to see Jenny. Jenny opened the door. "I just that Jenny right over?" she said. "I've been downtown with Will. He's bought a house and we've been selecting some furniture."

"I just heard of your good fortune from Mrs. Duane, Jenny," Miss Davidge said.

"Why didn't you tell me yoursel?

"I just heard or your good to from Mrs. Duane, Jenny." Miss Davidge said.

It's not 60 cents' worth of silk or satin, either, aithough it covers all of the "requirements."

It's 60 cents, worth of sugar bags.
To Miss Proud goes the honor of wearing the dress well. To Miss Doris Peterson, of Bellingham, Wash, goes the glory for making a dress for "four bits and one thin dime," in these days of high prices.

The dress was made from ordinary sugar sacks, or maybe it isn't possible for a sugar sack to be ordinary considering the scarcity and ascending value of its contents.

Anyway, the dress is made of sugar sacks, and is trimmed with crochet cotton in pink and green shades. It took Miss Peterson just two hours to make the dress. But it took her longer than that to convince Miss Strauss that it cost but 60 cents.

"It just shows what one can do when one tries," said Miss Strauss that it cost of wearing apparel."

Removed by Absorption

As undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan, redness or roughness, often freckles, too, the sensible thing to do is to remove such surface. There's nothing better for this than ordinary mercolized wax, which actually absorbs an unwholesome complexion. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed, gently, gradually, so there's no inconvenience, no detention indoors. Spread the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one cunce of mercolized wax at the drug store, use it for a week or so, you may expect marked improvement daily, when the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless purity and beautiful whiteness.

Don't let those summer wrinkles worry you; worry breeds more wrinkles.

Tears stood in Miss Davidge's eyes. "Yes, Jenny, dear, I will," she promised.
